I borrowed the white gelatine last time I called at the studio, and have managed to clean it. I am trying experiments with the copper plating process of reproducing statuettes that I suggested for the Pearson sketch group. When I have a sample finished I'll submit it to you tests. An electro plate tells me that he can not only coat the outside of a cast as shown (A) but the inside of a mould which gives the exact reproduction when the mould is broken away (B). The plating may be done at rate of $\frac{1}{32}$ " thickness of copper in $\frac{1}{2}$ to 1 hour. I am not yet sure that this latter is convenient to use for fine detail. Copper may be finished in silver gold or bronze.

Sincerely yours
Arthur J. Mumford
